INTRODUCTION

2 By way of a Consent Decree entered on May 29, 2014, the California Department of Fair
3 Employment and Housing (“DFEH”), the United States of America, and the Law School
4 Admission Council (“LSAC”) agreed to resolve the underlying lawsuit on an amicable basis, 5 before there had been any findings of fact or conclusions of law. The Decree’s four-year term 6 ends this year, on May 29, 2018. (Dkt. 203 at ¶ 30).

7 All parties agreed in the Decree to use an ADA Monitor to audit LSAC’s compliance.
8 Likewise, all parties subsequently agreed upon the individual who would serve as the Monitor, 9 Arthur Coleman. Mr. Coleman is a former Deputy Assistant Secretary in the U.S. Department of 10 Education’s Office for Civil Rights. In a report dated February 16, 2017, he concluded that 11 LSAC “has substantially complied” with all provisions of the Decree subject to his review.

12 Disagreeing with the Monitor’s findings, DFEH has filed a Motion for an Order Holding 13 Defendant in Civil Contempt and in the Alternative for Modification of the Consent Decree or an 14 Order to Show Cause Re Civil Contempt and Why Monitor Should Not Be Removed (Dkt. 254).
15 DFEH’s co-plaintiff, the United States, has not joined in DFEH’s motion.¹

16 Heated rhetoric aside, there is nothing in DFEH’s submission to support a finding of 17 contempt, extension of the Decree’s term, or dismissal of the ADA Monitor. In the first place, the 18 violations alleged by DFEH (involving the so-called “50% email,” alleged misclassification of 19 partial denials, alleged denial of appeal rights, etc.) have already been fully addressed by actions 20 voluntarily taken by LSAC following its participation in the dispute-resolution process called for 21 by the Decree. Civil contempt is intended to compel compliance with a court order going 22 forward, or to compensate a party for losses sustained because of alleged non-compliance. The 23 relief requested by DFEH would do neither.

24 _____
25 ¹ A collection of disability rights advocates have submitted an amicus brief in support of DFEH. (Dkt. 265). The 26 brief largely focuses on the pre-Consent Decree time period, which is not relevant to the current dispute. Id. at 1-4.
27 The amici also provide a general discussion of the ADA, id. at 5-7, which they say is “predicated upon the notion that 28 accommodation decisions are to be made on an individualized basis,” id. at 7. LSAC fully agrees. Unfortunately, however, the practices imposed on LSAC by the so-called “Best Practices” panel do not result in accommodation decisions being made on the individualized, objective basis contemplated by the ADA. Finally, the amici try to bolster DFEH’s inappropriate attempt to become the nationwide steward of LSAC’s compliance with the Decree Id.
at 8. The Decree, however, assigns that role to the U.S. Department of Justice, which has not joined in DFEH’s motion for an extension of the Decree’s term and replacement of the ADA Monitor.

1 Further, the facts do not support holding LSAC in contempt. DFEH's arguments are 2 based on grossly inaccurate characterizations of LSAC's actions and anecdotal information from 3 only three examinees, from among thousands who have received accommodations while the 4 Decree has been in effect. DFEH puts pejorative labels on LSAC's conduct and motivations, but 5 it falls well short of showing by clear and convincing evidence that LSAC violated any specific 6 and definite provisions of the Decree. It also inappropriately ignores the many areas in which 7 LSAC's compliance cannot be questioned. A finding of contempt is unwarranted.

8 Nor does Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b) provide a basis for extending the Decree or removing the 9 Monitor. The Court is being asked by a single party to the Decree to modify one of the Decree's 10 negotiated provisions, its four-year term. That would not be equitable or appropriate, given 11 LSAC's compliance with the Decree's terms over the past three-plus years and its voluntary 12 cessation of the practices to which DFEH has objected. Nor is replacement of the Monitor 13 appropriate. The facts do not support DFEH's attacks on Mr. Coleman, and his removal cannot 14 be justified as a Decree modification because the Decree did not appoint Mr. Coleman. The 15 Decree states that the parties are to agree on the Monitor. They agreed on Mr. Coleman. The 16 U.S. Department of Justice has not joined in DFEH's call to remove the Monitor.

17 At bottom, DFEH's motion seeks to punish a non-profit entity that has already been 18 punished to a degree that finds no parallel in the history of the U.S. Department of Justice's 19 enforcement of the ADA or DFEH's enforcement of the Unruh Act. LSAC paid more than $8.73 20 million to resolve the underlying claims, has since spent well over a million dollars more 21 complying with the Decree (see Decl of Kim Dempsey at ¶¶ 11-13, filed herewith) ("Dempsey 22 Decl."), and has implemented accommodation policies that are not required under the ADA or 23 imposed on any other testing organization.² If further nationwide obligations are to be imposed 24 on LSAC, that should happen only as the result of a notice-and-comment rulemaking that 25 produces reasonable standards that apply to all testing entities. Because LSAC has substantially 26

27 ² To our knowledge, no other testing entity employs or is subject to similar practices – and there are 28 hundreds of such testing entities. See 79 Fed. Reg. 4839, 4853-57 (Jan. 30, 2014) (estimate by DOJ that roughly 1,400 testing organizations are required to provide accommodations under the ADA).

1 complied with all of its obligations over the years in which the Decree has been in effect and has 2 voluntarily addressed DFEH's core concerns, the additional relief requested in DFEH's motion is 3 unwarranted, unnecessary and improperly punitive.

4 PROCEDURAL HISTORY

5 This case began with a complaint filed by DFEH in 2012. DFEH alleged that LSAC
6 violated the Americans with Disabilities Act ("ADA") in handling requests for accommodations 7 on the Law School Admission Test (the "LSAT"), and that the alleged ADA violations in turn 8 constituted violations of California's Unruh Act and Fair Housing and Employment Act. See 9 Complaint ¶¶ 1, 187-216 (Dkt. 1). DFEH brought the case on behalf of 17 named individuals and 10 a putative class consisting of "all disabled individuals in the State of California who requested a 11 reasonable accommodation for the [LSAT] from January 19, 2009 to February 6, 2012."
12 Complaint ¶¶ 2, 7, 8. LSAC denied all of DFEH's claims. (See Dkt. 58).

13 The United States moved to intervene as an additional plaintiff, noting that its 14 "enforcement authority under the ADA" was "directly implicated" by DFEH's claims. (Dkt. 47 15 at 4). The Court granted the motion, agreeing that the lawsuit "directly implicates" the ability of 16 the United States "to craft 'clear, strong, consistent, enforceable standards' in implementing the 17 [ADA]," and noting that "a stated purpose of the ADA was 'to ensure that the Federal 18 Government plays a central role in enforcing the standards established [in the Act] on behalf of 19 individuals with disabilities.'" (Dkt. 60 at 2). The Court also found that DFEH could not 20 adequately represent the interests of the United States in enforcing the ADA "on a national scale" 21 because DFEH's "jurisdiction is confined to the State of California" and DFEH "does not have 22 direct enforcement authority over the ADA." Id.

23 The parties subsequently participated in a lengthy mediation that resulted in the Consent 24 Decree. All parties agreed that it was in their best interests, the "public interest of California," 25 and the broader public interest, "to fully and finally resolve this matter on mutually agreeable 26 terms without trial of any issues of fact or law raised in any of the Plaintiffs' complaints, and 27 without resort to protracted litigation." (Dkt. 203 at 2). There was "no adjudication" of any 28 claims raised. Id.

1 Pursuant to the Decree, LSAC agreed to pay a total of $8,730,000 to amicably resolve the 2 plaintiffs' claims. (Dkt. 203 at ¶¶ 11-18, 21). It is undisputed that LSAC has complied fully with 3 these monetary obligations, which were among the Decree's core terms.

4 LSAC agreed to stop annotating accommodated test scores (id. at ¶ 9).³ It has done so.

5 LSAC agreed to prepare detailed reports regarding all accommodation requests that it 6 receives (id. at ¶ 23). It has provided those reports, which take hundreds of hours of staff time to 7 prepare for each test administration.

8 LSAC agreed to significantly revise its accommodation policies, and it has done so. Some 9 of the revised policies implement the Decree (e.g., id. at ¶¶ 5, 6), while others implement 10 recommendations made by the "Best Practices" panel after the Decree was entered.

11 The substantive and procedural requirements imposed on LSAC far exceed industry 12 norms. They are not evidence-based and they are unworkable. As a consequence, they often 13 disserve the interests of disabled examinees by resulting in the provision of extra testing time and 14 other accommodations to individuals who do not qualify under the ADA for accommodations.
15 Unwarranted accommodations can enable test-takers to inappropriately improve inflate their 16 LSAT scores, thereby obtaining an unfair advantage relative to other examinees, including 17 disabled test-takers for whom accommodations appropriately level the playing field.⁴

18 For example, the Panel imposed multiple layers of review if LSAC does not conclude that 19 an examinee is entitled to every accommodation he requested, and required that decisions be 20 provided on an expedited basis at each stage (in some instances, in as little as two days). If a 21 candidate appeals LSAC's denial of any part of his request, up to six professionals might have to 22 review the candidate's file – two internal professionals who work for LSAC, and four external 23 professionals retained by LSAC as independent consultants.

24 In addition, per the panel report, an external professional can never direct that a candidate

25 _____
26 ³ Under LSAC's score-annotation policy, LSAC provided a letter to schools when they received a score report for an 27 individual who tested with extra time. The letter noted (correctly) that scores earned with extra testing time do not 28 have the same meaning as scores earned with standard time, encouraged schools to interpret such scores with flexibility, and reminded schools that "civil rights statutes prohibit discrimination against persons with disabilities."

⁴ Numerous professionals submitted letters to the Court explaining why practices recommended by the panel are not
"best practices" and would likely harm individuals whom the ADA was intended to protect. See Dkt. 222, 230, 232.

1 is to receive fewer accommodations than LSAC approved, even if the professional believes that 2 no accommodations were warranted, and each external professional is bound by any decision of a 3 prior professional to approve an accommodation. This “one-way ratchet effect” involving up to 4 six professional reviewers, to be conducted in unreasonably compressed time frames, creates 5 enormous pressure on LSAC to grant all requested accommodations regardless of whether the 6 decision reflects a genuine and properly documented need.

7 LSAC appealed certain panel recommendations to the Court, as it was entitled to do under 8 the Decree. The Court upheld “most of the Panel's Report.” (Dkt. 245 at 2).

9 Although the Court rejected most of LSAC’s legal challenges, it remains true that none of 10 the panel’s core recommendations were evidence-based or consistent with the practices of other 11 testing entities. Further, the panel did not provide a framework for how LSAC would reasonably 12 operationalize the panel recommendations as it goes about the daily business of processing 13 accommodation requests. The panel did not anticipate numerous issues that have arisen from its 14 recommendations. Likewise, the panel appears not to have contemplated the massive increase in 15 accommodation requests that LSAC has experienced, now that examinees realize how easy it has 16 become to get extra time and other accommodations on the LSAT. LSAC has therefore had to 17 establish procedures that allow the accommodation process to function in an environment of ever-18 increasing numbers of requests, in a manner consistent with the Decree and the panel’s 19 recommendations. It is certain of those procedures that DFEH challenges.

20 STATEMENT OF FACTS

21 I. LSAC And Requests For Accommodations On The LSAT

22 LSAC is a non-profit association whose members consist of law schools in the U.S. and 23 Canada. LSAC develops and administers the LSAT examination. The LSAT is administered 24 under standardized conditions, so as to provide an objective measure of an examinee’s abilities 25 that can be reliably compared to scores achieved by other law school applicants.⁵

26 _____
 27 ⁵ “[S]tandardization helps to ensure that all test takers have the same opportunity to demonstrate their 28 competencies,” and that the scores achieved by one test taker can reliably be compared to the scores of other examinees. Standards for Educational & Psychological Testing at 111 (2014).

1 If an examinee has a mental or physical impairment that substantially limits a relevant 2 major life activity, the examinee is entitled under the ADA to receive reasonable accommodations 3 that will allow the examinee to test in an accessible manner. 42 U.S.C. § 12189. Individuals 4 request accommodations based upon a range of physical and mental impairments, but most rely 5 upon a diagnosis of a learning disability or ADHD. Dempsey Decl. ¶ 4.

6 Additional testing time is the most commonly requested accommodation. Extra testing 7 time, however, can affect the resulting scores. Studies have shown that LSAT scores earned with 8 extra time are not comparable to scores earned under standard conditions and tend to over-predict 9 performance in the first year of law school.

10 Because of the impact that accommodations can have on scores, testing entities routinely 11 have policies in place that are intended to protect the integrity of the resulting scores, while 12 respecting the legitimate concerns of all relevant parties: i.e., examinees with disabilities who 13 need accommodations to test on a level playing field, disabled and non-disabled examinees who 14 would not want other examinees to receive an inappropriate advantage by getting unwarranted 15 accommodations, and the entities that rely upon the scores to provide reliable information that 16 assists in evaluating applicants for admission, licensure or certification.⁶

17 LSAC had such policies in place when the underlying complaints were filed in this case.
 18 Although it denied the allegations, LSAC found itself confronting years of litigation, enormous 19 expense to defend the claims, and operational disruptions as staff were diverted from processing 20 requests and implementing accommodations. LSAC also confronted a potentially crippling 21 monetary judgment (in addition to fee-shifting). LSAC therefore decided to settle. It did so to 22 “fully and finally resolve” the matter without “protracted litigation.” (Dkt. 203 at 2).

23 In the three-plus years that the Decree has been in effect, LSAC and its staff have 24 endeavored in good faith to fully implement its terms. LSAC has retained additional staff to 25

26 ⁶ See, e.g., Powell v. Nat'l Bd. of Med. Exam'rs, 364 F.3d 79, 88-89 (2d Cir. 2004) (noting that NBME has “a duty to 27 ensure that its examination is fairly administered to all those taking it,” and that its accommodation policies are 28 intended to ensure that “individuals with bona fide disabilities receive accommodations, and that those without disabilities do not receive accommodations that they are not entitled to, and which could provide them with an unfair advantage when taking the ... examination.”).

1 assist with the Decree’s extensive data collection and reporting requirements, it has engaged 2 additional external professionals to assist in reviewing requests, it has conducted annual training, 3 and it has put procedures in place that attempt to implement in a reasonable manner the 4 unworkable practices and deadlines imposed under the “Best Practices” report. See, e.g., 5 Dempsey Decl. ¶¶ 12, 34-42; Decl. of C. Mew at Ex P, filed herewith) (“Mew Decl.”).

6 The operational challenges confronting LSAC would have been significant even if the 7 number of accommodation requests post-Decree had remained consistent with pre-Decree levels.
 8 That has not happened. Although test volume has remained stable (approximately 101,000 to 9 110,000 exams administered each testing year), the number of accommodation requests has 10 increased by over 350% since the test year that ended shortly before the Decree was entered.
 11 LSAC received approximately 1,475 requests in the June 2013-February 2014 test year. It will 12 likely receive more than 5,265 requests in the current test year.⁷ In the past two years alone, the 13 number of requests submitted to LSAC has almost doubled.⁸ See Dempsey Decl. ¶¶ 7-10.

14 II. The ADA Monitor Under the Consent Decree

15 Pursuant to the Decree, the parties “mutually agreed” upon an “independent ADA 16 Monitor” whose purpose is to “assist the United States, the DFEH, and the Court in evaluating 17 LSAC’s compliance with the Decree.” (Dkt. 203 at ¶ 24). The Decree states that no party “shall

18 _____
 19 ⁷ The enormous increase in the number of accommodation requests and the number of requests granted by LSAC has 20 had a significant financial impact. For example, for the test year just prior to the Decree’s entry, LSAC incurred 21 roughly $96,000 in costs for test supervisors, test facility fees, administrative services, and outside disability 22 consultants, and roughly $25,750 in costs to ship materials needed for accommodated administrations. For the 23 comparable four administrations in 2016/2017, those costs rose, respectively, to roughly $567,350 and $137,450. See Dempsey Decl. ¶ 11. These cost increases dwarf DOJ’s estimate, in 2014, of how much additional cost testing entities would incur following enactment of the ADA Amendments Act. See 79 Fed. Reg. 4839, 4853-57 (Jan. 30, 2014) (estimating that the total annual cost of having to provide accommodations to more test takers would range from roughly $850 for “small national testing entities” to “approximately $11,818 per medium/large national testing center establishment”).

24 ⁸ Candidates with a diagnosis of ADHD “overwhelmingly comprised” the category with the most accommodation 25 requests during the Consent Decree period. See LSAC Technical Report 17-03, “Accommodated Test-Taker Trends 26 and Performance,” at 2 (Sept. 2017) (www.lsac.org/docs/default-source/research-\(lsac-resources\)/tr-17-03.pdf/tr-17-03.pdf)).
 During the Decree’s term, the vast majority of these individuals have been granted accommodations on the LSAT.
 27 DOJ has noted elsewhere, however, that a significant number of individuals who claim to have ADHD do not, in fact, 28 qualify as disabled under the ADA. 79 Fed. Reg. at 4852 n.11.

The recent LSAT study found that test takers who received extra testing time on the LSAT “had higher average LSAT scores in 18 of the 20 test administrations” covered in the study “compared to the Non-accommodated group.”
See LSAC Technical Report 17-03 at 2.

1 have any supervisory authority” over the Monitor’s activities or “interfere with the independent 2 functions” of the Monitor, id., and calls upon the Monitor to conduct three audits of LSAC’s 3 compliance with the Decree, id. at ¶ 25. The audits would “address LSAC’s compliance with the 4 reporting requirements contained in Paragraphs 8 and 23 and LSAC’s implementation of the Best 5 Practices discussed in Paragraph 8 [of the Decree].” Id.

6 With the agreement of all parties, Arthur Coleman was retained to serve as the ADA 7 Monitor. An Honors graduate from Duke University’s School of Law, Mr. Coleman served for 8 over six years in the U.S. Department of Education’s Office for Civil Rights during the Clinton 9 administration, including three years as a Deputy Assistant Secretary. Mew Decl. Ex. Q. In those 10 positions, he had responsibility for developing federal civil rights policies and enforcing federal 11 laws in a range of areas, including standards reform, test use, students with disabilities, 12 affirmative action, sexual and racial harassment, and gender equity. Id. He has testified before 13 the U.S. Senate and the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, he has served as an adjunct professor 14 at two law schools, and he has spoken and published extensively on issues involving education 15 and testing. Id.

16 On February 16, 2017, Mr. Coleman released a report that combined the first and second 17 audits called for under the Decree. See id. Ex. R. Based upon his review of accommodation files 18 onsite at LSAC, reports that LSAC provided in accordance with the Decree, and discussions with 19 LSAC personnel, Mr. Coleman concluded that LSAC has “substantially complied with all 20 provisions” of the Decree subject to his review. Id. at 4. He has one more audit to conduct, at the 21 end of the Decree’s term in May 2018. (Dkt. 203 at ¶ 25).

22 III. Decree Provisions Regarding Resolution of Post-Decree Disputes

23 The Decree anticipated that disputes might arise regarding its interpretation and 24 implementation. It states (in ¶ 31) that “a good faith effort shall be made by the Parties” to 25 resolve any such dispute, using the procedure set forth in the Decree. Under that procedure, the 26 parties are required to “meet and confer by telephone and attempt to resolve the issue informally.”
27 Id. If those efforts do not succeed, any party may “pursue the issue with the Court.” Id. The 28 Decree further states that, in “any enforcement motion brought by any Party, no Party will object

1 to the admissibility, on hearsay grounds, of the ADA Monitor’s Audit Reports.” Id.

2 IV. LSAC Actions Challenged In DFEH’S Contempt Motion

3 DFEH’s Contempt Motion centers around LSAC’s use of so-called “50% emails” when 4 processing certain accommodation requests, starting with the February 2016 administration of the 5 LSAT. Without conceding any previous lack of compliance, LSAC voluntarily stopped using 6 “50% emails” as of the December 2017 administration of the LSAT. Dempsey Decl. ¶ 53. The 7 “50% email” is no longer used. Thus, none of the Decree violations and harms allegedly 8 resulting from this prior form of communication are occurring now or will occur going forward.

9 The term “50% email” is a short-hand reference that LSAC used internally to identify 10 letters that LSAC emailed to candidates whose documentation, based on a preliminary review, 11 supported some but not all of the accommodations they requested. Some of these candidates had 12 received accommodations on another standardized test, thereby entitling them to receive the same 13 accommodations on the LSAT under Paragraph 5(a) of the Decree, but the candidate asked for 14 additional accommodations. For example, a candidate might have received 50% extra testing 15 time on the SAT college admissions test, but then asked for 100% extra time on the LSAT. In 16 response to such a request, LSAC would send a “50% email.” The email would say that LSAC 17 had confirmed that the candidate was eligible for 50% extra testing time but could not determine 18 whether the candidate was entitled to 100% extra time. LSAC would then give the candidate the 19 option of revising his request to ask for the accommodations that his documentation supported, or 20 submitting additional documentation that would support the additional time requested. Some but 21 not all of the 50% emails also stated that, if the candidate did not reply to the email (thereby 22 enabling LSAC to confirm the approved accommodations and make the necessary arrangements), 23 the candidate would remain registered to take the LSAT for the upcoming administration as a 24 standard test taker, with no accommodations.⁹ See Dempsey Decl. ¶¶ 54-60 and Ex. R.

25 _____
26 ⁹ LSAC began using 50% emails with the February 2016 LSAT. The emails used for that test were typically worded 27 along the following lines: “Based on a preliminary screening of your request for accommodations on the February 6, 28 2016 LSAT, we are prepared to approve you for [A, B and C accommodations]. However, we are unable to process your request for [D] because the documentation necessary to support this request was not submitted. You have two options: 1. You can revise your request and accept the accommodations described above for which you are currently eligible, or 2. You can pursue your request for [D accommodation] by submitting an appropriately documented statement of your need. The statement of need must be received [by] ... January [XX], 2016. Please indicate which 91471164.1

1 Many of the “50% emails” sent by LSAC, however, did not involve Paragraph 5(a) 2 candidates. Instead, they were candidates whose documentation supported some 3 accommodations (often, the 50% extra time that the panel had concluded is sufficient for most 4 examinees),¹⁰ but they asked for more extra time or requested additional accommodations (e.g., 5 stop-the-clock breaks). These candidates were not automatically entitled to receive any 6 accommodations under Paragraph 5(a) (because they had not previously received 7 accommodations on a standardized test). These candidates were also sent “50% emails,” for 8 certain administrations of the LSAT. See Dempsey Decl. ¶¶ 54-58.

9 The fact that a candidate received a 50% email does not mean that he was not approved 10 for accommodations. To the contrary, many recipients received everything they requested.
11 Others informed LSAC that the accommodations supported by their initial documentation were 12 acceptable, often thanking LSAC for its communication, and they were approved for those 13 accommodations. See Dempsey Decl. ¶¶ 63-64 and Exs. T & U. DFEH’s suggestion that 14 examinees felt “pressured” by LSAC’s 50% email, or viewed the email as an “ultimatum,” 15 DFEH Mot. at 1-3, may be supported by the three examinee declarations that DFEH submitted, 16 but it is not supported by the broader universe of communications that LSAC received in response 17 to 50% emails. See Dempsey Decl. ¶ 67. LSAC could perhaps have worded the emails more 18 artfully, but there was no intent to subvert the Decree or deny anyone accommodations to which 19 they were entitled, and certainly no attempt to pressure examinees. Id. ¶¶ 66, 82.

20 The bulk of the non-compliance allegations in DFEH’s motion are based upon LSAC’s 21 use of the “50% email.” The alleged lack of a written statement of reasons for a denial, lack of 22 independent review of denials, and frustration of candidates’ ability to appeal a partial denial, are 23 all derivative of the allegations regarding the “50% email.”

24
25 option you intend to pursue by replying to this email.” The additional language objected to in DFEH’s motion (at 1-26 2) was not added until the June 2017 administration. See Dempsey Decl. ¶ 60-61 and Ex. R.

27 ¹⁰ For some candidates, “50% email” was a misnomer and did not reflect what LSAC had actually approved. For 28 example, LSAC may have approved 100% extra testing time for a candidate because that was what was previously accorded on another standardized test, but the candidate was seeking 150% extra testing time on the LSAT.

V. LSAC Did Not Attempt To Hide Its Actions

1 DFEH suggests that LSAC used white-out on tracking forms to prevent DFEH from 2 discovering LSAC's alleged violations. See DFEH Mot. at 2, 15, 19. There is no substance to 3 that unfounded allegation. See generally Dempsey Decl. ¶¶ 75-82.

4 The Decree requires LSAC to track and report voluminous amounts of information.
5 Forms are used to capture that information. The individuals who enter the required data into 6 Excel spreadsheets are often temporary staff, brought on to do this additional work required by 7 the Decree. To make sure that these staff members capture accurate information for the 8 spreadsheets, LSAC's core accommodations personnel use often use white-out to make changes 9 on the tracking forms. Id. ¶¶ 78-79.

10 For example, white-out is used to correct misspelled candidate names or dates that have 11 been entered inaccurately. It has also been used to increase the amount of testing time that a 12 candidate has ultimately been approved for, where a lower amount had been recorded previously.
13 Likewise, if a given candidate revised his initial request to change the accommodations requested 14 – in response to a 50% email or for some other reason – LSAC accommodations staff would 15 reflect the change on the tracking form in the candidate's file by whiting out the accommodation 16 that had initially been requested and then writing in the revised request. This ensured that the 17 tracking form had updated and accurate information when it was used by staff members to enter 18 data required to be reported under the Decree. Id. The tracking form remained in the candidate 19 file, clearly showing that white-out had been used, and so did the candidate's accommodations 20 request form and any "50% email," showing what the candidate had initially asked LSAC to 21 provide. Id. ¶¶ 80-81. Thus, when DFEH, DOJ or the ADA Monitor reviewed a given 22 candidate's file, they had a complete and accurate history of that candidate's request and how it 23 had been handled by LSAC. There was no effort to conceal anything. Id. ¶ 82.

VI. LSAC's Discontinuation Of "50% Emails"

24 LSAC stopped using 50% emails during its processing of accommodation requests for the 25 December 2017 LSAT. Dempsey Decl. ¶ 53. The change was made in early to mid-October 26 2017, before DFEH filed its Contempt Motion. When LSAC made the change, it had already 27
28

1 begun processing accommodation requests for the next test. Approximately 40 individuals who 2 requested accommodations on the December 2017 LSAT received a “50% email,” id. – out of the 3 1,640+ individuals who requested accommodations on that test. Id. Upon deciding to stop using 4 50% emails, LSAC approved all accommodations requested by these 40 individuals regardless of 5 how, or whether, they had responded to LSAC’s 50% email, with the exception of 3 individuals 6 who were inadvertently overlooked. Those three individuals responded to LSAC’s 50% by 7 choosing to test with the accommodations that were supported by their documentation, and LSAC 8 approved those accommodations. See id.

9 VII. Illustration Of The Panel’s Review And Appeal Procedures

10 To give the Court a sense of how the Panel’s review and appeal processes operate with 11 respect to an actual candidate, LSAC provides the following example using a request for 12 accommodations that LSAC received for the December 2017 LSAT.¹¹ This candidate had been 13 diagnosed at a relatively late point in his educational progression as having an Attention Deficit
 14 Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) and a Learning Disability Not Otherwise Specified. Dempsey 15 Decl. ¶¶ 15, 24. Although he had not received accommodations on any other standardized 16 admissions test, id., he asked LSAC to provide 100% additional testing time and numerous non-17 time accommodations:

18 Step One -- LSAC reviewed the request and approved almost all of the requested 19 accommodations. Dempsey Decl. ¶ 24 & Ex. E. LSAC approved (i) 100% extra 20 time, (ii) additional break time, (iii) private testing room, (iv) snacks and drinks, (v) 21 ear plugs, (vi) scratch paper, (vii) mechanical pencil, (viii) medication, (ix) backpack 22 and (x) white noise machine. Id. at 1-2. The only accommodation that LSAC staff 23 believed had not been supported was the request that he not have to take the 24 experimental section of the test (also known as the variable section), which LSAC 25 administers to pre-test questions. Id. at 2.

26 Step Two -- Before communicating its decision to the candidate, LSAC referred the 27 candidate’s entire file to an external professional for review. Id. at 1. By the terms 28 imposed by the “Best Practices” panel, the professional could not reduce the accommodations already approved by LSAC, even if he concluded that the candidate had not shown that he is disabled or needed any accommodations. The professional could only address LSAC’s denial of the candidate’s request to be exempted from the experimental section. Per panel requirements, the external professional had two days

¹¹ Here and elsewhere, LSAC has redacted personally identifiable candidate information.

1 to complete his review and provide written findings. Id.

2 The external professional agreed that the candidate had not shown a need for the 3 additional accommodation. He also noted that LSAC appeared to be giving the 4 candidate “far more time” than his “condition warrants,” and that double testing time 5 had been shown in research studies to “significantly over-compensate[] students with 6 ADHD.” See Dempsey Decl. Ex. F. Under the procedure imposed by the Panel, 7 however, the external professional had no authority to override LSAC’s decision.

8 Step Three -- Because this professional agreed that the additional accommodation 9 was unwarranted, LSAC was required under the panel’s report to seek the opinion of 10 another external professional. On October 10, 2017, LSAC forwarded the first 11 external professional’s report to a second independent expert for review. See 12 Dempsey Decl. Ex. G.

13 The second external professional agreed that no justification had been shown for 14 exempting the candidate from the experimental section of the test. Dempsey Decl.
15 Ex. H. at 1. In doing so, he noted that there was “insufficient evidence to establish 16 the presence of the learning disability and ADHD that [the candidate] reports,” or that 17 the candidate “requires any extended time to access the LSAT.” Id. Under the panel 18 procedures, however, he could only make a recommendation regarding the single 19 denied accommodation, even though he saw no basis for any accommodations.

20 Step Four -- Only after its own two internal professionals and two external 21 professionals had reviewed the candidate’s documentation did LSAC communicate 22 with the candidate. LSAC’s letter informed the candidate that he had been approved 23 to receive almost all of his requested accommodations, explained why LSAC had 24 decided to deny one of his requested accommodations, and described the manner and 25 deadlines for filing an appeal. See Dempsey Decl. Ex. I.

26 Step Five -- The candidate appealed LSAC’s decision. Per panel recommendations, 27 this triggered a requirement that LSAC send the file out for review by at least one and 28 potentially two additional external experts (again subject to very short deadlines).

The first additional professional concurred with LSAC’s decision and the decision of the two other external professionals that there was no basis for the additional accommodation. In doing so, he noted that the “ADHD diagnosis was not adequately substantiated” and characterized the accommodations that LSAC had approved as “numerous and generous.” Dempsey Decl. Ex. L.

Step Six – LSAC then sent the candidate’s file to another external professional. This professional also concluded that there was no basis for exempting the applicant from the experimental section of the test, noting in the process that the approved accommodations were “extremely generous” given the candidate’s supporting documentation. Dempsey Decl. Ex. M.

Step Seven -- On October 23, 2017, LSAC informed the candidate of the results of the appeal. Dempsey Decl. Ex. N.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

DFEH seeks a finding of civil contempt, DFEH Mot. at 17-22; or Decree modification, id. at 23-25; or an order to show cause why LSAC should not be held in contempt, id. at 25.¹²

I. Legal Standard for Civil Contempt

“A court may wield its civil contempt powers for two separate and independent purposes: (1) ‘to coerce the defendant into compliance with the court’s order;’ and (2) ‘to compensate the complainant for losses sustained.’” Shell Offshore Inc. v. Greenpeace, Inc., 815 F.3d 623, 629 (9th Cir. 2016). Thus, a finding of civil contempt should be entered only when the requested relief would “coerce obedience to a court order” with regard to actions required by the order but not yet taken, and/or to compensate the moving party for “actual losses” it has sustained as the result of the alleged past violations of the court’s order. General Signal Corp. v. Donallco, Inc., 787 F.2d 1376, 1380 (9th Cir. 1986).

The moving party in a civil contempt proceeding has the burden of showing by “clear and convincing evidence” that the alleged contemnor “violated a specific and definite order of the court.” Henderson v. Lincoln Square, LLC, No. 12-1938-JCS, 2015 WL 1885497, *3 (N.D. Cal. April 24, 2015) (citation omitted). A finding of willfulness is not required, id., but “a person should not be held in contempt if his action ‘appears to be based on a good faith and reasonable interpretation of the court’s order,’” Reno Air Racing Ass’n v. McCord, 452 F.3d 1126, 1130 (9th Cir. 2006) (citation omitted). A court cannot find a defendant in contempt for failing to comply with a consent decree where the defendant has been “reasonably diligent in attempting to accomplish what was agreed to in the Decree,” Thompson v. Enomoto, 542 F. Supp. 768, 769 (N.D. Cal. 1982), and “[a]ll reasonable doubts must be resolved in favor of the non-moving party,” U.S. v. State of Oregon, 782 F. Supp. 502, 507 (D. Ore. 1991).

“Substantial compliance” is “a defense to an action for civil contempt.” Henderson, 2105 WL 1885497 at *3. If the non-moving party shows that it “took all reasonable steps to comply, ¹² See, e.g., Hawecker v. Sorenson, 2013 WL 3805146, *3 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (“Although the Government seeks the issuance of civil contempt sanctions by and through its motion, the entry of sanctions is not appropriate at this time.... In general, proceedings for civil contempt ‘are instituted by the issuance for an Order to Show Cause ... why a contempt citation should not issue and notice of a date for the hearing.’”) (citations omitted).

1 technical or inadvertent violations of the order will not support a finding of civil contempt.” Id.

2 There is no “precise formula” for evaluating substantial compliance. Labor/Cmt’y 3 Strategy Ctr. v. L.A. Cty. Metro. Transp. Auth., 564 F.3d 1115, 1122 (9th Cir. 2009). Instead, the 4 court takes a “holistic view” of all “available information” in determining whether a party’s 5 overall compliance with a decree “was substantial, notwithstanding some minimal level of 6 noncompliance.” Id. In the process, the court must give “due weight” to “the many ways [a 7 party] met or exceeded its obligations” under the decree. Id. at 1121.

8 II. Legal Standard for Modifying a Consent Decree

9 “Because the decree contains an express expiration date for the court’s retention of 10 jurisdiction, any change to that date entails a modification of the decree.” Labor/Cmt’y Strategy 11 Center, 564 F.3d at 1120. Modification is typically requested under Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

12 According to DFEH, “the appropriate subdivision of Rule 60(b) for modification of a 13 consent decree is either subdivision (5), which authorizes relief where ‘applying [the judgment] 14 prospectively is no longer equitable,’ or subdivision (6), which authorizes relief for ‘any other 15 reason that justifies relief.’” DFEH Mot. at 23. Although its argument for modification is sparse, 16 see id. at 23-24, DFEH appears to be relying on Rule 60(b)(5).

17 The party seeking a modification under Rule 60(b)(5) “bears the burden of establishing 18 that a significant change in circumstances warrants revision of the decree.” Rufo v. Inmates of 19 Suffolk Cty. Jail, 502 U.S. 367, 383 (1992). If this “heavy burden” is met, the “court must then 20 determine whether the proposed modification is suitably tailored to resolve the problems created 21 by the changed factual or legal conditions.” U.S. v. Asarco Inc., 430 F.3d 972, 979–80 (9th Cir.
22 2005). “The failure of substantial compliance with the terms of a decree can qualify as a 23 significant change in circumstances that would justify the decree’s temporal extension,” but any 24 instances of noncompliance must be viewed in a “holistic” manner and with due regard for 25 whether other requirements of the decree have been met. Labor/Cmt’y Strategy Center, 564 F.3d 26 at 122-23 (refusing to extend the term of a decree where the alleged instances of noncompliance 27 were “nowhere close to the near total noncompliance in cases in which courts concluded that 28 extensions of the consent decree were warranted”).

1 Modification of a court judgment is an “extraordinary remedy.” NLRB v. Harris Teeter
 2 Supermkts, 215 F.3d 32, 35 (D.C. Cir. 2000); see also S.E.C. v. Worthen, 98 F.3d 480, 482 (9th 3 Cir. 1996) (modification of a permanent injunction under Rule 60(b)(5) is ““extraordinary relief, 4 requiring extraordinary circumstances”) (citation omitted). This is particularly true when the 5 judgment is a consent decree, because modification allows a party “to escape commitments 6 voluntarily made and solemnized by a court decree.” Harris Teeter, 215 F.3d at 35.

7 ARGUMENT

8 I. DFEH’s Contempt Motion Should Be Denied

9 A. LSAC Has Already Addressed The Alleged Decree Violations

10 A finding of contempt is not warranted here because it would not serve either of the “two 11 separate and independent purposes” for which courts wield their contempt power: “(1) ‘to coerce 12 the defendant into compliance with the court’s order;’ and (2) ‘to compensate the complainant for 13 losses sustained.’” Shell Offshore Inc. v. Greenpeace, Inc., 815 F.3d 623, 629 (9th Cir. 2016).

14 LSAC has stopped using 50% emails. Dempsey Decl. ¶ 53.¹³ To the extent any of 15 DFEH’s alleged violations are not linked to the 50% email, such as certain of the alleged 16 reporting deficiencies, LSAC voluntarily changed its practices, or provided supplemental reports, 17 following participation in the informal dispute-resolution process set forth in the Decree. See id.
 18 at ¶¶ 48-52. Thus, a finding of contempt is not needed to compel future compliance, even if one 19 accepts DFEH’s argument that LSAC’s past actions violated the Decree. See Shell Offshore, 815 20 F.3d at 630 (overturning the lower court’s civil contempt order because “a coercive sanction 21 would no longer serve any purpose”).

22 B. DFEH Has Not Sustained Any Losses

23 Nor is a finding of contempt warranted as a basis for compensating DFEH for losses 24 sustained because of alleged past violations. Putting aside its request for reimbursement of 25 $3,000 in airfare costs incurred to review documents at LSAC’s offices (where such review was 26

27 ¹³ DFEH’s motion questions LSAC’s representation that it has stopped using the “50% email.” DFEH Mot. at 17.
 28 However, that skepticism is not grounded in fact. LSAC voluntarily discontinued its use of the 50% emails beginning last October. See Dempsey Decl. ¶ 53.

1 required to take place under the Decree), DFEH is not seeking relief for any losses it claims to 2 have sustained because of the alleged violations. Nor is it seeking compensation for any losses 3 sustained by individuals who received 50% emails.

4 Instead, DFEH argues that the Court should “extend the Decree nationwide for two years
5 (to May 28, 2020), as compensation for the two years during which LSAC violated the Court’s 6 Orders....” DFEH Mot. at 1. That is not the type of “compensation” that can support an exercise 7 of a court’s civil contempt power. The requested relief does not monetarily compensate anyone 8 for losses sustained as a result of the alleged violations. See Shell Offshore, 815 F.3d at 629
9 (“Because civil compensatory sanctions are remedial, they typically take the form of 10 unconditional monetary sanctions....”).

11 C. DFEH Has Not Shown Any Violation Of A Specific And Definite Court Order

12 DFEH’s request for a contempt finding also fails because, even if the relief requested by 13 DFEH warranted an exercise of the Court’s contempt power, DFEH has not presented clear and 14 convincing evidence that LSAC violated a specific and definite court order.

15 DFEH asserts that three “court orders” are relevant here: the Consent Decree, the Final 16 Report of the “Best Practices” panel (Dkt. 220), and the Court’s opinion ruling upon LSAC’s 17 challenges to the panel’s report. DFEH Mot. at 1 n.1. It then proceeds to argue that LSAC 18 violated “the Court’s orders” without, in many instances, identifying which purported “order” 19 was violated or quoting any “specific and definite” language.

20 LSAC believes that only one order should be considered in evaluating DFEH’s contempt 21 motion, the Consent Decree. The panel report was not a court order and it is not clear enough in 22 any event to support a finding that LSAC violated any “specific and definite” requirements found 23 in that report. Cf. Gates v. Shinn, 98 F.3d 463, 468-69 (9th Cir. 1996) (“[T]hese requirements for 24 specificity within the four corners of the consent decree require a distinction between the 25 specificity of the consent decree, and the specificity of the mediator’s recommendations. The 26 consent decree itself, not merely the mediator’s subsequent directives, must command the prison 27 officials to provide the level of psychiatric care at issue....”). The Court’s opinion on LSAC’s 28 challenges to the panel’s report was a court order, but it did not impose any independent

1 obligations on LSAC. (Dkt. 245). Instead, the order “modified,” “invalidated,” or otherwise 2 explained various provisions in the panel’s report, and refused to invalidate other provisions in 3 the report. (Dkt. 245 at 26-27).

4 Having said this, the outcome should be the same even if the Court adopts DFEH’s view 5 of the relevant court “order.” With one or two arguable exceptions, which LSAC has already 6 addressed following the meet-and-confer dispute resolution process called for by the Decree, 7 DFEH has not shown, and cannot show, by clear and convincing evidence, that LSAC violated 8 any specific and definite obligation under any of the “orders” relied upon by DFEH.

9 DFEH left no stone unturned in trying to manufacture alleged violations of the Decree and 10 panel recommendations – so much so that, when it got to the part of its brief that purportedly sets 11 forth how “LSAC Violated Specific And Definite Orders of this Court,” DFEH said that the 12 violations were “too numerous to repeat” and instead provided a “few examples.” DFEH Mot. at 13 18-19. LSAC responds in kind below. See also Mew Decl. Exs. G, H, I, K & L (letters to 14 Plaintiffs during meet-and-confer process, addressing alleged violations).

15 1. Alleged Violations of Paragraph 5(a) by Sending 50% Emails

16 DFEH asserts that the 50% emails that LSAC sent to certain candidates violated 17 Paragraph 5(a) of the Decree, which “required that prior approved testing accommodations be 18 provided ‘without further inquiry or request for additional documentation.’” DFEH Mot. at 19 19 (quoting Decree ¶ 5(a) (emphasis supplied by DFEH). That is not the case.

20 The actual language in Paragraph 5(a) provides, in relevant part, as follows: “Upon 21 receipt of ... proof [of prior testing accommodations] in accordance with LSAC’s established 22 deadlines, without further inquiry or request for additional documentation, LSAC shall grant 23 those previously approved testing accommodations, or the equivalent testing accommodation 24 offered on the LSAT...” (Dkt. 203 at ¶ 5(a)). The 50% emails did not violate this requirement.

25 True, LSAC did not use the word “granted” in its emails. Instead, the emails told 26 candidates that LSAC was “prepared to approve,” were “currently eligible,” or had provided the 27 required documentation for the accommodations they received previously. Dempsey Decl. ¶ 60 28 & Ex. R. The emails did not tell candidates they had to provide additional records to receive the

1 accommodations they previously received, or make further inquiry regarding those 2 accommodations. Instead, the emails reported on LSAC's preliminary findings and noted in a 3 timely and efficient manner that certain other accommodations requested by the candidates had 4 not yet been adequately supported. The emails then asked the candidates to reply to LSAC's 5 email so that LSAC would know how the candidates wanted to proceed: did they want to receive 6 only the accommodations that their documentation supported (i.e., the accommodations received 7 on a prior test), or would they like to submit additional documentation in support of the other 8 accommodations they were seeking?

9 To the best of LSAC's knowledge, no examinee ever said that he or she felt threatened or 10 intimidated by LSAC's 50% email. Dempsey Decl. ¶ 67. To the contrary, most simply 11 responded to the email as they would to any other communication that occurs as part of the 12 interactive process contemplated under the ADA and expressly called for in the panel report. See 13 id. ¶¶ 63-64 & Exs. T & U; see also id., Ex. A at 15. In all events, however, LSAC is no longer 14 using the challenged 50% emails.

15 2. Other Alleged Violations Attributed to Use of 50% Emails

16 DFEH asserts that LSAC's use of 50% emails violated "Issue 2" of the panel report, 17 which calls on LSAC to presumptively grant certain non-time accommodations. See DFEH Mot.
18 4. According to DFEH, the Panel instructed that, "if the candidate provides the documentation 19 recommended by the Panel, LSAC must presumptively grant the requested accommodation 20 'without requiring the candidate to provide additional information.'" Id. However, DFEH's own 21 statement of what Issue 2 purportedly requires shows that a 50% email cannot be viewed as 22 violating Issue 2: LSAC alerted the candidate to the need for additional documentation to support 23 one or more of his accommodations because the candidate had not provided the documentation 24 that the Panel had recommended as appropriate for such accommodation requests. See also Dkt.
25 245 (stating that panel recommendation in Issue 2 does not "negat[e] the requirement that a 26 candidate ... show what accommodation is appropriate by, for example, submitting evidence of 27 past testing accommodations or a 'reasonable explanation for each testing accommodation as it 28 relates to the candidate's disability.'") (quoting panel report).

1 DFEH asserts that the 50% email violated “Issue 4” in the panel report, which requires 2 that all requests not granted in full “must be reviewed by one or two outside consultants.” DFEH 3 Mot. at 4. However, the emails make clear that they reflected LSAC’s “preliminary” 4 determination, not a final decision by LSAC staff. Therefore, LSAC was not required at that 5 point to send the candidate’s request out for review by external professionals. The same analysis 6 applies with respect to DFEH’s assertion that recipients of 50% emails were deprived of their 7 right to pursue an appeal involving one and possibly two additional external professionals, in 8 violation of panel Issue 8. See id. at 8. LSAC’s determination was preliminary. When a final 9 decision was subsequently made, candidates retained their appeal rights.

10 DFEH asserts that the 50% emails violated the panel’s requirement that LSAC engage “in 11 cooperative and interactive communications with candidates seeking testing accommodation.” 12 DFEH Mot. at 5-6. Just the opposite is true, however. The 50% emails evidence precisely the 13 sort of cooperative and interactive communication that was contemplated. DFEH’s contrary 14 arguments are based on its assertion that the three examinees who provided declarations to DFEH
15 felt “pressured” by the emails. Id. at 6. Those assertions, however, are belied by the declarant’s 16 actual communications with LSAC, see Dempsey Decl. ¶¶ 83-109, and are at odds with how 17 other examinees responded to the emails, see id. ¶¶ 63-64 and Exs. T & U.

18 DFEH asserts that the 50% emails violated a panel recommendation that LSAT “not 19 attempt to alter the request for an extended testing time accommodation.” DFEH Mot. at 7.
20 However, the emails do not reflect any attempt to “alter” a candidate’s request. To the extent that 21 the emails involved a time accommodation, they simply told the candidate what amount of extra 22 time was supported and what amount of time was not. They left entirely up to the candidate 23 whether he was content with the amount of time his documentation supported or wanted he 24 wanted to pursue additional time by submitting missing documentation.

25 3. Alleged Reporting Violation: “No Decision” Designation

26 DFEH asserts that LSAC violated the Decree when it reported that it made “no decision” 27 on certain candidate requests. DFEH Mot. at 9-10. As a general matter, LSAC reports that it 28 made “no decision” on a candidate request when: (a) the request was received after the deadline;

1 (b) the candidate had not registered for the test; or (c) the request lacked the necessary baseline 2 documentation. See Dempsey Decl. ¶¶ 43-47. In these instances, the request is not approved or 3 denied, because LSAC has not made a substantive decision on the request.

4 According to DFEH, LSAC can only report the following actions on any given request:
5 granted in full, denied in full, or denied in part. DFEH Mot. at 9-10. The Decree, however, 6 requires LSAC to track “whether” a request was “granted in full or denied in full or denied in 7 part.” (Dkt. 203 ¶ 8(a)(k)). Reporting that “no decision” was made on a request complies with 8 this requirement. It reports that a request was neither granted or denied. DFEH’s reliance on the 9 panel report as establishing a supplemental reporting requirement, see DFEH Mot. at 10, is 10 misplaced. The panel was not asked to address reporting requirements and did not purport to do 11 so in the discussion cited by DFEH. (Dkt. 220-2 at 21 n.11)

12 DFEH also fails to note that it has been aware of LSAC’s practice of reporting certain 13 requests as “no decision” since the outset of the Decree, and that this issue was specifically 14 addressed between the parties in the Decree’s first year. In a March 6, 2015 letter, DOJ and 15 DFEH expressed concern that LSAC’s September and December 2014 reports did not list any 16 decision for a large number of candidates. See Mew Decl. Ex. A. LSAC responded that the 17 Decree does not require LSAC to report decisions if no decision was made on the request:
18 “LSAC is not obligated to provide data for candidates for whom no decision has been made either 19 because the request was late, because a form was missing, or because the candidate was not 20 registered for the test.” See Mew Decl. Ex. B at 18, C at 4 (Apr. 3, 2015 letters). DOJ and DFEH 21 disagreed with LSAC’s interpretation and asserted that LSAC was effectively “denying” a request 22 even where no decision is made. Mew Decl. Ex. D at 5.

23 The parties subsequently held a meet-and-confer call. Following this call, DOJ and DFEH 24 agreed to receive supplemental reports from LSAC for the September and December 2014 tests.
25 See Mew Decl. Ex. E. They also confirmed “that this issue has been resolved in the Feb. 2015 26 report.” Id. The February 2015 report listed “no decision” as the outcome of some 27 accommodation requests. See Mew Decl. ¶ 18. LSAC sent supplemental September and 28 December 2014 reports on May 5, 2015, which likewise reported “no decision” for many

1 requests. See id. ¶ 17. DFEH and DOJ raised no objections. All of LSAC’s reports since that 2 time reported “no decision” for many candidate requests, with a reason provided (e.g., “late,” “not 3 registered,” “does not meet documentation guidelines,” “file incomplete”), see Mew Decl. ¶¶ 19-4 28, and DFEH and DOJ raised no further objection to this practice for almost two years. LSAC’s 5 reporting is consistent with the Decree and is the most accurate description of the action taken by 6 LSAC with respect to the “no decision” requests.

7 4. Other Alleged Reporting Violations

8 DFEH argues that LSAC failed to report when it requested additional documentation from 9 candidates. See DFEH Mot. at 10. DFEH and LSAC, however, have different interpretations of 10 what it means to request “additional” documentation. LSAC believes that a request for additional 11 documentation is made within the meaning of the Decree when a candidate has fulfilled his or her 12 threshold documentation requirements under the Decree and “Best Practices” recommendations 13 (e.g., the Candidate Form or evidence of disability when required), and LSAC tells the candidate 14 that supplemental documentation is needed. See Dempsey Decl. ¶ 49. DFEH views the 15 requirement far more broadly, to include any request for any “document.” While LSAC believes 16 that its interpretation is reasonable and correct, any disagreement in this regard cannot support a 17 finding of contempt because the Decree’s language is not specific and definite.

18 Moreover, despite receiving years of reporting from LSAC, DFEH did not raise this issue 19 until its May 2017 notice of alleged Decree violations. Here, too, despite disagreeing with 20 DFEH’s interpretation, LSAC has agreed as part of the meet-and-confer process to report all “no 21 decision” requests based on incomplete documentation as instances where LSAC requests 22 additional documentation from the candidate. See id.

23 DFEH complains that LSAC failed to report the names of outside consultants who 24 reviewed accommodation requests. See DFEH Mot. at 10. This was an unintentional oversight 25 that LSAC promptly remedied after the issue was brought to its attention: LSAC provided 26 supplemental reports that included the missing information. See Mew Decl. ¶ 29; Dempsey Decl.
27 ¶ 51. DFEH’s reliance on LSAC’s inadvertent omission of one piece of information from the 28 voluminous reports as grounds for civil contempt is unreasonable and contrary to the terms of the

1 Decree. See Dkt. 203 at ¶ 31 (requiring the parties to resolve issues informally and to seek relief 2 only if an issue cannot be resolved through good faith discussions).

3 DFEH also takes issue with LSAC’s reporting of Kim Dempsey, LSAC’s Manager of 4 Accommodated Testing, as the individual who made a substantive decision whether to grant or 5 deny each request. See DFEH Mot. at 10. Once again, the parties have differing interpretations 6 of the Decree, but nothing in LSAC’s actions constitutes a clear violation of any specific and 7 definite Decree language. And, once again, LSAC has already addressed DFEH’s concerns
8 despite disagreeing with DFEH’s interpretation. During the meet-and-confer process, LSAC 9 agreed to report the names of other individuals who review accommodation requests, even if 10 those individuals are not technically making substantive decisions to grant or deny the requests, 11 and it has been doing so in its reports. See Dempsey Decl. ¶ 52.

12 5. Alleged Violations Involving Denial of Access to Records

13 DFEH alleges that LSAC “violated the Decree by systematically denying DFEH access to 14 all ‘granted in full’ files.” DFEH Mot. at 10-11. It also appears to object to the fact that it was 15 required to review records at LSAC’s offices. See id. at 23 (stating that DFEH had to incur the 16 “unusual expense” of sending attorneys to Pennsylvania to review LSAC’s records). These 17 allegations do not support a finding of contempt.

18 The Decree allows DFEH and DOJ to review certain LSAC records during the term of the 19 Decree. Dkt. 203 at ¶¶ 23, 26(a). Any such review is to take place at LSAC’s offices. Id. DFEH 20 begrudgingly concedes this fact. DFEH Mot. at 10. Thus, it was neither “unusual” nor 21 inappropriate that DFEH’s attorneys had to go to Pennsylvania to review LSAC records.

22 DFEH’s central allegation, however, is that it was wrongly denied access to all “granted in 23 full” files, which it “believes” contain the “the bulk of the ‘50% email’ violations.” Id. at 11.
24 LSAC has not violated the Decree by denying DFEH access to files.

25 As DFEH acknowledges, the “Decree is structured so that the Monitor has superior access 26 [than DOJ and DFEH] to LSAC ‘data and personnel,’” thereby enabling the Monitor “to conduct 27 the required audits.” DFEH Mot. at 10. Nevertheless, in emails leading up to DFEH’s and DOJ’s 28 visit to Pennsylvania, DOJ sought access to candidate files “for every individual whose request

1 for testing accommodations was either denied in full or was reported ... as a ‘no decision’ for the 2 Dec. 2015 through Dec. 2016 LSAT administrations.” Carrasco Decl. Ex. 10 (12/2/16 and 1/9/17
3 emails from N. Sinha). DOJ and DFEH subsequently requested an expanded set of candidate 4 files from the December 2015-February 2017 administrations of the LSAT, including “(1) all 5 candidates whose requests for a testing accommodation was denied in part or full, or assigned ‘no 6 decision,’” and “(2) for California, all files for candidates whose requests were granted in full....”
7 Carrasco Decl. Ex. 11 (3/16/17 email from N. Sinha). Plaintiffs stated that they “expected” 8 DFEH to be allowed the same access to candidate files as the DOJ, id., even though the Decree 9 provides that DFEH would only be allowed access to California candidate files, see Dkt. 203 ¶¶
10 23, 26(a). Plaintiffs also stated that they “compromised” in “agreeing” to inspect candidates files 11 onsite in Pennsylvania, see Carrasco Decl. Ex. 11 (3/17/17 email from N. Sinha), notwithstanding 12 the fact that the Decree that only allows DOJ and DFEH on-site access to candidate records, see 13 Dkt. 203 ¶¶ 23, 26(a). The parties engaged in further communications regarding files that would 14 be provided for review. See Carrasco Decl. Ex. 11 (3/28/18 email from J. Van Tol). Within these 15 communications, DFEH sought access to twenty-one specific candidate files for California, which 16 included candidates whose requests were “granted in full.” See Carrasco Decl. Ex. 11 (3/30/17 17 email from I. Trasovan). LSAC agreed to provide access to the files for “denied in full” or “no 18 decision” requests. It declined to provide access to files for candidates whose accommodations 19 were “granted in full.” See Carrasco Decl. Ex. 11 (4/7/17 email from J. Van Tol).

20 Subsequently, however, LSAC provided DFEH with copies of “granted in full” files that it 21 requested following its visit to LSAC. See Mew Decl. ¶ 31. Thus, LSAC did not, as DFEH 22 alleges, “systematically deny[] DFEH access to all ‘granted in full’ files.” See DFEH Mot. at 10.
23 DFEH also appears to be mistaken in asserting, as it does in a declaration from one of its 24 attorneys, that DFEH first “discovered” that LSAC was using 50% emails during its review of 25 candidate files at LSAC’s offices. Carrasco Decl. ¶ 30 (Dkt. 249-2). LSAC provided DFEH at 26 least one candidate file that contained a 50% email several months before DFEH reviewed any 27 records at LSAC’s offices. In December 2016, LSAC sent DFEH a copy of testing 28 accommodation records for Phillip Movaghar in response to an administrative complaint that Mr.

1 Movaghar filed with DFEH. See Mew Decl. ¶ 33. The file contained 50% emails. See id.
 2 DFEH was thus on notice about LSAC’s use of 50% emails more than a year ago, well in advance
 3 of when it reviewed records at LSAC’s offices (April 2017), and well in advance of when it first 4 accused LSAC of violating the Decree by sending 50% emails (May 2017). There is simply no 5 basis for DFEH to accuse LSAC of a “bad faith attempt to withhold from Plaintiffs evidence of 6 LSAC’s [alleged] violations.” See DFEH Mot. at 22.

7 Finally, LSAC has offered on repeated occasions during the meet-and-confer process to 8 allow DFEH additional access to any candidate files that it wants to review. See, e.g., Mew Decl.
 9 Ex. G at 10, H at 8, I at 5, K at 3. LSAC has also offered to make it accommodations personnel 10 available for discussions with DFEH, to address any remaining concerns. DFEH has not accepted 11 those offers. Instead, it asks the Court to award DFEH relief for LSAC’s purported 12 “contemptuous conduct,” including granting DFEH “an additional 15 days of access to 13 documents.” DFEH Mot. at 10, 22-23. This relief is unwarranted and unnecessary. DFEH 14 should have continued to discuss its concerns in good faith with LSAC (as it was required to do 15 under the Decree) and accepted LSAC’s proposed reasonable resolution of those concerns, 16 instead of pursuing an enforcement action in court.

17 D. LSAC Has Substantially Complied With Its Obligations Under the Decree

18 As touched upon previously, LSAC has taken numerous actions to comply with its 19 obligations under the Decree over the past 3 and half years, including the following:

- 20 • Paid $6.73 million into a settlement fund (Decree ¶ 11.b)
- 21 • Retained a claims administrator/participated in claim administration process (Id., ¶¶12-17)
- 22 • Paid the cost of the claims administrator ($172,114) (Id., ¶ 11.b.iii)
- 23 • Paid $945,000 to the named individual plaintiffs (Id., ¶ 11.a)
- 24 • Paid a $55,000 civil penalty to DOJ (Id., ¶ 10)
- 25 • Paid $1,000,000 in attorneys’ fees ($900,000 of which went to DFEH) (Id., ¶ 21)
- 26 • Stopped annotating scores achieved with extra testing time (Id., ¶ 9)
- 27 • Participated in the “Best Practices” panel process (Id., ¶ 7)
- 28 • Tracking voluminous amounts of data for every candidate and every exam (Id., ¶ 8.a)

- 1 • Preparing extensive reports after each test administration (Id., ¶ 23)
- 2 • Retained ADA Monitor and facilitated his review process (Id., ¶¶ 24-27)
- 3 • Paid the costs of the ADA Monitor ($70,000 to date) (Id., ¶ 28)
- 4 • Modified its website information (Id., ¶¶ 5.e, 5.f, 22)
- 5 • Extensively modified its accommodation forms and policies ¶
- 6 • Maintained accommodation-related complaints (Id., ¶ 8.b)
- 7 • Set up a separate electronic mailbox for submission of complaints (Id., ¶ 8.d)
- 8 • Processed > 12,500 accommodation requests, using Decree and panel procedures

10 These actions are reflected in reports that LSAC has provided to DFEH, DOJ and the ADA 11 Monitor as part of its reporting requirements. E.g., Mew Decl. Ex. P.

12 II. Modification Of The Decree Is Not Warranted Under Rule 60(b)

13 DFEH seeks to extend the Decree’s term for two years and replace the ADA Monitor as 14 purported modifications of the Decree. DFEH Mot. at 23. The latter relief does not involve a 15 modification of the Decree, however, and is clearly not warranted under Rule 60(b).

16 Rule 60(b)(5) states, in relevant part, that a court may relieve a party from a final 17 judgment if “applying it prospectively is no longer equitable.” That language does not 18 immediately make sense in the present context, because the relief requested by DFEH – a two-19 year extension of the Decree – does not relieve DFEH or anyone else from the Decree. It keeps 20 everyone bound by the Decree, for an additional two-year term.

21 What DFEH presumably is arguing, however, is that it should be relieved from the 22 provision in the Decree that says the Decree has a four-year term, because it is “no longer 23 equitable” to leave the agreed-upon term in place. DFEH is wrong. Indeed, it would be 24 fundamentally inequitable to excuse DFEH from having to honor the four-year term to which all 25 parties agreed after extensive negotiations. Doing so would deprive LSAC of the benefit of its 26 bargain on a key Consent Decree term.

27 The review and appellate requirements established by the “Best Practices” panel are 28 unworkable, impose unnecessary costs and administrative burdens, result in accommodations that

1 often unwarranted, and have caused significant operational problems at testing sites.¹⁴ The 2 requirements (a) are not required under the ADA or any other federal or state law; (b) do not, in 3 fact, reflect “best practices;” (c) often result in arbitrary, non-evidence based decisions; and (d) 4 have the perverse effect of harming individuals who the ADA was intended to protect. Nothing
 5 LSAC has done over the past three years in attempting to operationalize the panel’s 6 recommendations justifies a finding of contempt or continued imposition of the panel’s 7 recommendations.

8 Moreover, as the Ninth Circuit observed in rejecting a similar attempt to extend the term 9 of a consent decree, the alleged instances of noncompliance here are “nowhere close to the near 10 total noncompliance in cases in which courts concluded that extensions of the consent decree 11 were warranted.” Labor/Cmt’y Strategy Center, 564 F.3d at 122-23. A recent case in the latter 12 category is Kelly v. Wengler, 822 F.3d 1085 (9th Cir. 2016), which DFEH relies upon here. See 13 DFEH Mot. at 20-21. That reliance is misplaced. This case is far more analogous to 14 Labor/Cmt’y Strategy than it is to Kelly, where it was “not seriously disputed that [the defendant] 15 was in substantial violation” of a settlement agreement that had been incorporated into a dismissal 16 order, there were “other reasonable steps” the defendant could have taken to get into compliance 17 that the defendant neglected to take, and extension of the decree was need to compel compliance 18 with the settlement agreement and give the plaintiff the benefit of its bargain. See id. at 1096-98.
 19 Viewing the Decree holistically and with due regard for all the many actions taken by LSAC in 20 compliance with the Decree and the panel recommendations, as required under Labor/Cmt’y 21 Strategy Center, it is appropriate to conclude that LSAC has substantially required with all of its

22
 23 ¹⁴ For example, one accommodation that candidates can request is “stop-the-clock breaks.” This basically means 24 that the candidate can stop testing at any point, rest, and then resume testing without losing any testing time. The 25 “Best Practices” panel decided to expand upon this accommodation by requiring LSAC to add one minute of testing 26 time whenever an approved candidate takes a break. As a result, some candidates are manipulating the approved 27 breaks to get additional testing time for which they had not otherwise been approved. In December 2017, for 28 example, one candidate took 45 stop-the-clock breaks during his test (thereby gaining 45 extra minutes of testing time). As a result, an exam that normally lasts a half day did not conclude until roughly 10 p.m., requiring the proctor to spend 14 hours to administer this one test. See Dempsey Decl. ¶ 20 & Ex. D. Another examinee used more than 150 stop-the-clock breaks after being approved to test over two days, and ended up receiving more than 16 hours of testing time (compared to three hours provided to examinees under standard conditions). Id. 19 & Ex.
 C. Such manipulation of a panel-required accommodation imposes enormously on test administrators (making them less inclined to assist with future administrations) and significantly increases test administration costs.

1 obligations under the Decree and the panel report.

2 Finally, far from being “narrowly tailored,” DFEH’s proposed relief would impose all 3 Decree requirements and all panel recommendations on LSAC for an additional two-year term, 4 regardless of whether those requirements are the subject of any alleged violations. In addition, 5 despite its limited jurisdiction, DFEH is seeking relief on a nationwide basis rather than relief that 6 applies only with respect to California examinees.

7 No modification of the Decree is warranted under Rule 60(b).

8 III. There Is No Basis For Removing The ADA Monitor

9 The parties agreed upon the ADA Monitor. The Monitor concluded that LSAC was in 10 substantial compliance with its Decree obligations. Clearly not happy with that result, DFEH 11 accuses the Monitor of “incompetence” (DFEH Mot. at 16), argues that his audit and report are 12 egregiously flawed, and seeks his removal.

13 DFEH and Professor Peter Blanck take issue with Mr. Coleman’s chosen methods of 14 auditing. See DFEH Mot. at 12. However, the Monitor was given wide-ranging discretion 15 regarding how he conduct his audits, and the parties were explicitly forbidden from interfering 16 with the “independent functions” of the Monitor. See Dkt. 203 at ¶ 24.¹⁵

17 DFEH asserts that Mr. Coleman failed to detect various purported “violations” of the 18 Decree, but this assumes that DFEH’s scattergun allegations of Decree violations are correct – 19 and they are not. It is true that Mr. Coleman did not note LSAC’s inadvertent failure to include 20 the names of outside consultants on its testing reports, see DFEH Mot. at 13, but this LSAC 21 oversight was well within DFEH’s ability to address directly with LSAC without the assistance of 22 the Monitor and that is exactly what happened (with LSAC promptly remedying the oversight).

23 DFEH objects that the Monitor “did not mention the fact that in September 2016, LSAC 24 increased by 20% ... the length of the LSAT for test takers granted the accommodation of 25 _____

26 ¹⁵ DOJ and DFEH wanted Professor Blanck to serve as the ADA Monitor, see, e.g., Carrasco Decl., Ex. 3, 27 so the fact that he supports DFEH here is not surprising. LSAC declined to select Professor Blanck as the 28 Monitor because it had significant concerns regarding his objectivity. See id. (May 5, 2015 e-mail from R.
Burgoyne). In all events, the salient fact here is that DFEH agreed to have Mr. Coleman serve as the Monitor. It did so after DOJ and/or DFEH attorneys interviewed Mr. Coleman, talked to his references, and reviewed other materials regarding his background. See id. Exs. 1-3.

1 additional test time.” DFEH Mot. at 13. LSAC did not “increase the length of the LSAT” in 2 September 2016, however, as alleged by DFEH, see Dempsey Decl. ¶¶ 69-71, so there was no 3 reason for the Monitor to have addressed that issue.

4 DFEH objects that Mr. Coleman designated his report as Confidential. See DFEH Mot. at 5 13. However, the Decree explicitly states that “[a]ll non-public information obtained by the ADA
6 Monitor shall be maintained in a confidential manner, and all information obtained by the ADA 7 Monitor shall be used only for the purposes of implementing this Decree.” (Dkt. 203 at ¶ 26(a)).
8 Almost all information reported by the ADA Monitor is “non-public,” and he was required -- or 9 in all events permitted -- to designate his report confidential.

10 DFEH objects about the level of detail in the Monitor’s billing statements. DFEH Mot. at 11 13. The Decree requires the Monitor to provide “sufficient detailed monthly invoices.” Dkt. 203 12 ¶ 28. This provision was included for the benefit of LSAC, which bears the entire burden of the 13 ADA Monitor’s fees, costs, and expenses. LSAC and Mr. Coleman agreed upon a flat fee for his 14 work, see Carrasco Decl. Ex. 3 (10/21/15 email from R. Burgoyne), making detailed invoices 15 unnecessary. Mr. Coleman’s invoice provides no basis for removing him as Monitor.

16 Finally, and most importantly, DFEH has not shown any legal basis for its challenge to 17 the Monitor’s work -- as relief for purported contempt, as a modification of the Consent Decree or 18 otherwise. The Decree is clear: “No Party, nor any employee or agent of any Party, shall have 19 any supervisory authority over the ADA Monitor’s activities or interfere with the independent 20 functions of the ADA Monitor....” Dkt. 203 ¶ 24. Despite this, DFEH repeatedly attempted to 21 interfere with and direct and supervise his activities, going so far as to provide a detailed, redlined 22 revision to his draft audit report, and taking umbrage when he failed to accept their proposed 23 revisions. See Carrasco Decl. ¶¶ 18-20 and Exs. 5, 8. The request to have him removed is but the 24 latest attempted interference with the Monitor’s “independent functions.”

25 The Decree sets out procedures for a party to seek relief from the recommendations of the 26 “Best Practices” panel, Dkt. 203 at ¶ 7(d)(vii), for addressing disputes relating to the Claims
27 Administrator, id. ¶ 11(b)(5), and for resolving a dispute about reimbursement of the Monitor’s 28

1 fees and costs, id. ¶ 28, but nothing in the Decree allows a party to challenge the Monitor’s 2 conclusions or seek his removal.¹⁶

3 As the Court noted in reviewing LSAC’s challenge to the “Best Practices” panel report:

4 The Parties elected to delegate certain issues to a panel of experts with experience
5 in relevant fields. That decision is not subject to second-guessing at this stage—6 the Consent Decree does not permit the Court to substitute its judgment for that of 7 the Panel on the merits of how requests for accommodation should be reviewed 8 and decided. To the extent that the Parties and amici argue merely that the Panel 9 erred in determining how best to resolve those issues actually delegated to it, such 10 arguments are ‘out of place.’

11 Dkt. 245 at 10 (quoting United States v. Armor & Co., 402 U.S. 673, 681-82 (1971)).

27 ¹⁶ To the best of LSAC’s knowledge, DFEH did not give the Monitor an opportunity to respond to the accusations in 28 its contempt motion and motion in limine before filing those motions, nor has it served the motions on the Monitor.
