

Syracuse University College of Law invites applications from tenured associate or full professor lateral candidates for a position on the Law Faculty

The College of Law is seeking candidates with a strong record of research in disability law for a tenured position as a law professor and Director of the College of Law's Disability Law and Policy Program. The successful candidate will bring current grant funding that will complement the significant portfolio of funded disability related research at the College of Law. The successful candidate should also expect to explore collaborations with the Burton Blatt Institute, the College of Law's nationally recognized disability research center.

Candidates should be tenured professors with active research agendas, a record of grants and sponsored research, and a demonstrated commitment to excellent classroom teaching and scholarship. Candidates should hold a JD degree from an accredited law school. Candidates with a PhD in addition to a JD degree from an accredited law school are preferred. Preferred experience and credentials include advanced degrees, judicial clerkships, relevant legal practice, or similar experience. A candidate's ability to contribute to the diversity of the College of Law community is also a preferred qualification.

Candidates are expected to teach courses in both the residential law program and in our online JD interactive program. Courses taught will include disability law, health law, and torts. Candidates can expect to teach a first-year course or a core upper-division course, along with other courses as needed.

Interested applicants are encouraged to send their resume and names of three references, including academic references, who can assess the candidate's potential as a legal academic, to Professor Kristen Barnes, Chair, Faculty Appointments Committee, Syracuse University College of Law, Syracuse, New York 13244; email: gkbarnes@syr.edu. Syracuse University is committed to diversity and is an equal opportunity employer. Applications will be accepted until the position is filled; however, priority consideration will be given to applications received prior to August 31, 2022.
