Disability Representation Study

Seeking participants over 18 who identify as having a disability for a virtual study. Older adults encouraged! If interested, pre-screening survey is here:

https://forms.gle/1ash2nH7bPwKPL5p7

We are a team of accessibility researchers in the Informatics Department of the University of California, Irvine and we are running a study on visual and written depictions of disability.

We are looking to recruit people over the age of 18 who identify as having a disability to participate in a 1-hour virtual focus group and optional 1-hour follow-up interviews. Participants will be compensated with a $20 Visa Gift Card for each hour of participation.

We are hoping this study will lead to greater understanding of how technologists should represent and describe disability in design materials. We also want to gain insight into how personal identities shape reception and reactions to visual and written depictions of marginalized identity.

If you have any questions, please contact:

Emory Edwards
Lead Researcher
206-909-8282
i.edwards@uci.edu

Stacy Branham
Faculty Sponsor
703-489-4373
sbranham@uci.edu