

Are you ready to embrace a new sport and represent the United States on the global stage?

Welcome to blind cricket—a unique version of cricket crafted especially for visually impaired athletes. Originating over 100 years ago, blind cricket began when two blind factory workers in Melbourne transformed a tin can filled with rocks into a game, creating a pathway for visually impaired players to engage in competitive sports. Today, this incredible legacy continues under the World Blind Cricket Council, and you have the chance to become part of it!

Blind cricket is now expanding across the United States, and we're calling on passionate, adventurous individuals to join the national team. With no state teams to navigate, you'll step directly into representing America on an international level! Train with us, master the skills, and get ready to travel to India in 2025 for your first tournament—an experience of a lifetime!

Blind cricket has three categories of blind players, ranging from fully blind to low vision. This means that anyone, regardless of their level of vision loss, is eligible to try out for the team. Additional requirements include being over 18 years old and a legal resident of the United States.

Whether you're an athlete, a sports lover, or just looking for a unique challenge, we want you on our team! To learn more about how you can make history with blind cricket, please contact:
