I know you staff (Elizabeth White) is doing home visits to blind clients in Flint to check if they have supplies/need information/etc. This is wonderful.

Can you check with her and tell me by COB today how far she has progressed? I heard she had hoped to have all home visits done by the end of the week. Is it just the 11 or so on Flint water or is she visiting all 36 clients?

All,

Please note the Detroit Free Press article after my signature line that denotes state personnel at the Flint Office Building on Union Street knew or should have known of problems with the Flint water in January of 2015. Now, I'm requesting the following information:

Any correspondences to staff or customers related to the water coolers and their locations.

-Any correspondences related to any measure to notify the public who are blind in alternate formats about this option. In other words were large print and Braille notices produced, let alone disseminated and posted?

-Copies of any notice from anyone in BSBP to customers in the Flint Michigan area about the potential hazardous water during that time to the present.

-Any correspondences to any blind customer from then to the present in the Flint area detailing resources for lead testing, availability of bottled water, or any other resource. In other words just who, what, when, where, why and how were blind customers notified not only of the crisis but, also of resources?

-Also show me even one post to BSBP's own web site relative to notice to the public and resources and note as of yesterday there was a big "nothing".

Of course, I'm still awaiting any such document, notice, etc. as it sure hasn't been forthcoming to my person in any format.

Regardless, please send requested information in my most effective format, a timely manner, and without surcharge in accordance with your Obligations under Title II of the ADA and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Send them as plain text attachments to my e-mail address listed above.

Amid denials, state workers in Flint got clean water

LANSING In January of 2015, when state officials were telling worried Flint residents their water was safe to drink, they also were arranging for coolers of purified water in Flint's State Office Building so employees wouldn't have to drink from the taps, according to state government e-mails released Thursday by the liberal group Progress Michigan.

A Jan. 7, 2015, notice from the state Department of Technology, Management and Budget, which oversees state office buildings, references a notice about a violation of drinking water standards that had recently been sent out by the City of Flint.

"While the City of Flint states that corrective actions are not necessary, DTMB is in the process of providing a water cooler on each occupied floor, positioned near the water fountain, so you can choose which water to drink," said the notice.

"The coolers will arrive today and will be provided as long as the public water does not meet treatment requirements."

Caleb Buhs, a spokesman for DTMB, said the water coolers were provided in response to the city health notice in late December or early January, which he acknowledged was about a contamination issue the city said had already subsided. The state continued to provide the coolers of purified water, right up to today, because "there were more findings as we went along," Buhs said.

Buhs said his department never told state workers the tap water was unsafe to drink, but only provided an alternative, as a landlord would do for tenants.

Lonnie Scott, executive director of Progress Michigan, said it appears the state was not as slow as initially thought in responding to the Flint drinking water crisis.

"Sadly, the only response was to protect the Snyder administration from future liability and not to protect the children of Flint," Scott said. "While residents were being told to relax and not worry about the water, the Snyder administration was taking steps to limit exposure in its own building."

After months of downplaying concerns, including warnings from researchers about high lead levels in both the drinking water and in the blood of Flint children, the administration of Gov. Rick Snyder acknowledged around Oct. 1 a problem that is now a full-blown public health crisis garnering international headlines. Michigan DEQ Director Dan Wyant resigned in December after acknowledging officials failed to require the city to use needed corrosion-control chemicals when they switched the source of their supply to Lake Huron water treated by Detroit to Flint River water treated at the Flint water treatment plant.

The lack of corrosion controls caused lead to leach from pipes, joints and fixtures into an unknown number of Flint households beginning in April of 2014, when the city began using the Flint River as a temporary cost-cutting move while under the control of a state-appointed emergency manager. Flint customers were switched back to Detroit in October, but the potential danger persists because of damage to the water distribution infrastructure.

Snyder declared a state of emergency on Jan. 5 and a week later called out the Michigan National Guard to help distribute bottled water and water filters in Flint. The state of emergency, which was set to expire next week, was extended Thursday through April 14.

Included in the e-mail string obtained by Progress Michigan is an e-mail from Mike Prysby, a district engineer in the DEQ's drinking water division, whose name had surfaced earlier in connection with the Flint drinking water public health crisis.

Prysby, who had been forwarded an e-mail from other state officials asking whether he would know more about the safety of Flint's drinking water by March 1, forwarded the e-mail to Stephen Busch, the district supervisor, who on Jan. 22 of this year was suspended without pay for his role in the drinking water catastrophe.

Appears certain state departments are concerned with Flint's WQ (water quality)," Prysby said in the e-mail to Busch. "I will return the call ..."

On Jan. 23, 2015, the Free Press ran a story, accompanied by a photo of Flint residents holding up jugs of brown water, that said concerns of city residents ranged from the taste, appearance and odor of the water to unexplained rashes and illnesses, even sick pets. Concerns about lead had not been raised then, though experts now say the color of the water — and the fact GM had announced it stopped using it because it was too corrosive to metal parts — should have been a tip-off that metals, including lead, were leaching into the water.

The January 2015 Free Press story noted that in August and September, the city issued three advisories to boil Flint water after detecting coliform bacteria.

Just before Christmas, residents received notices that state tests indicated higher-than-acceptable levels of trihalomethane (TTHM), a by-product of the chlorine disinfectants added to the water to kill the bacteria.

The article said that despite a recent alert about TTHM levels having exceeded federal guidelines in 2014, city officials maintained the water was safe.

The article said that Michigan DEQ officials gave the same assurances at a meeting at Flint City Hall on Jan. 21.

Prysby represented the DEQ at that Flint City Hall meeting and told residents the chlorine did its job and cleaned the water of microbial pathogens that can cause disease within days, the article said. That meant the water was safe for healthy people to drink for a short time, Prysby was quoted as saying.

The trade-off, Prysby said, was TTHM, possibly a danger for the very young, the very old, or the very sick if they ingest it long-term, he added.

"But we're talking decades," he said, adding that those who are worried should talk to their doctors.

Dear Mr. Rodgers,

As the Director of the lead agency for blind people in the State of Michigan I have some questions related to BSBP's efforts to assist people who are blind in Flint and indeed Genesee County.

For example, your agency has data and discrete information about blind citizens of this count. So has BSBP acted affirmatively to send out any information in accessible formats to even one person who is blind about resources, etc.?

Has BSBP done anything about ensuring ththat other agencies including DHHS makes all of its information fully accessible to blind citizens including where to get lead testing kits and how to make those materials concerning how to use them accessible? Or has it done anything about making videos related to this fully accessible? Has BSBP sent out any of its Vision Rehab Therapists to homes to show people the alternate techniques of acquiring and installing filters, lead testing, and even just how to get water?

Has BSBP done one thing to assist blind residents about anything including in its own Flint Office building where now Lt. Gov. Calley is working?

Also, what proactive role has BSBP ever engaged in related to emergency preparedness and people who are blind? Please give me even one example.

In that regards would you please remit to me any and all correspondences between you, anyone within BSBP and anyone in state government concerning BSBP and its efforts related to the Flint Water Crisis.

Oh, yes and please send those to me in a fully accessible format and without delay or surcharge. You know the requirements under Section 504 and the ADA and you know my most accessible format.

By the way I'm a blind resident of this county and deal in Flint all the time and I live just three miles from the Flint City limits. I've received nothing.

Sincerely,

Good morning Mr. Harcz,

Please be advised that staff from BSBP have been involved in the effort to inform Flint residents of the information necessary to help in the Flint water crises. The regional manager for Vocational Rehabilitation Services, which is responsible for the Flint area, has been working diligently to contact current blind clients to ensure they have received any available information. In addition, members of the BSBP staff have been involved in the ongoing effort which has gone door to door in the Flint area to inform citizens of the information being disseminated by newspapers, television stations and radio. BSBP has an annual grant that has been given to the National Federation of the Blind to make newspapers accessible to Michigan's blind citizens through Newsline.

Any specific questions you may have I can refer to the Vocational Rehabilitation staff that has been involved in this effort.

As I indicated at the library this morning for the Scott Norris award, I have talked to Beth White to get a status report. Beth has indicated to me that she has contacted either directly, or by telephone, all 11 blind clients who were identified as living in the water district. I will follow up with her indicating that we would now like her to contact the remaining 26 blind clients that were originally identified.

If you need anything else please let me know.
